Re: Best Dad Ever

Elementary School children were asked to write essays about their dads. Here are a few entries.

- A first grader writes, "My dad is the best dad ever. I would kiss a pig for him."
- Another first grader writes, "My dad is a Frito-Lay man. That is an important job because Frito-Lay means chips, which is food. That is so important because you could not live without food."
- A third grader writes, "The dad in my life isn't really my dad. He's my Grandpa. But he's been like a dad to me since before I was born . . . I hope that as I get older Grandpa will teach me all the stuff he knows about wood, and first-aid, and everything else he knows about. My Grandpa isn't my father, but I wouldn't trade him for all the dads in the world."
- A fourth grader writes, "Sometimes as a joke I'll put my stinky socks in his briefcase, so at work the next day he will think of me! He's always at the concerts and plays that I'm in, even though he lives about an hour away."
- A fifth grade girl writes, ". . . You know what else my dad does? He braids my hair. I'm the only girl I know whose dad braids her hair. I think that's a perfect dad. He already is the world's greatest dad to me. I just wanted everyone to know that.

Happy Father's Day to all who have had an influence in some child's life. Remember these remarks and know that you are cherished.
In the Lord's love and joy, Pastor
